CONTENTS:

CROWN OF WILD OLIVE.

ETHICS OF THE DUST.

QUEEN OF THE AIR.

MORNINGS IN FLORENCE.

SESAME AND LILIES.

The Wing of Arael.

By MONA CAIRD.

Those who have read Mrs. Caird's article on marriage, in the Nineteenth Century, already know something of her vigorous English, and will not be disappointed in the pages of her novel. They are imbued with the same power, intensity and earnestness, but are richer and more symmetrical, as the occasion demands, in the development of the human character and motives concerned. PRICE 30 cents.

The Fatal Phynne.

By F. C. PHILIPS, author of "As in a Looking Glass," and MRS. C. J. WILLS.

The principal character in the story is Dr. Thologan, an old Frenchman and a distinguished physician, who marries his ward, a beautiful girl, and then is consumed with an inordinate jealousy of his friend, George Leigh, a young artist. The story is gloomy, but there is excellent characterization in it, and the central idea is worked out with much cleverness. PRICE 30 cents.

The Luck of the House

By ADELINE SERGEANT.

Is a story showing more than average ability. A number of the characters possess the merit of being drawn on lines that are fresh and unhackneyed. The scene of the story is laid chiefly in Scotland, and no fault can be found with the local color or accessories. PRICE 30 cents.

Sophy Carmine.

By JOHN STRANGE WINTER

Does anybody ever tire of John Strange Winter and her delightful army people. Here in Sophy Carmine are many of our old acquaintances: Bootles and his wife and their inimitable little maids, Lal and Mignon, Jane and her Lord, and the demure Sophy. It is deliciously told; arch, and dainty, and captivating, and the denouement is all one could wish. PRICE 30 cents.

Jezebel's Friends.

By DORA RUSSELL.

Dora Russell, author of "The Broken Seal," is also the author of a novel called "Jezebel's Friends," which is replete with sensational incidents, and cannot fail to please the lovers of this class of fiction. PRICE 30 cents.

That Other Woman.

By ANNIE THOMAS.

It is a romantic story that is written in a pleasant style, and is entertaining from introduction to finish.

PRICE 30 cents.

Comedy of a Country House

By JULIAN STURGIS.

Is an extremely clever and readable novel. There is enough of plot in it to arouse the interest of the reader, but the chief merit of the book is in its ease of style and freshness and vivacity. The characters are well drawn, and possess no small degree of originality—which is something not common in the fiction of the time. The book may be commended to lovers of fiction as a clean, breezy, spirited and interesting novel.

PRICE 30 cents

The Tree of Knowledge.

By G. M. ROBINS.

A fascinating book of fiction which all lovers of light literature should read. The work bears a strong stamp of originality and power.

PRICE 30 cents.

The Lady Egeria.

By J. B. HARWOOD.

This is one of the English library school of novels, but it is so smoothly written that one reads on and on—not deeply interested, but not bored. A good book, therefore, for a travel or a summer sojourn.

PRICE 30 cents

Syrlin.

By OUIDA.

The announcement of a new novel by Ouida sends a thrill of delight through the countless host of faithful admirers of that petulant priestess of mild improprieties. Her new books are just like her old ones. There is the usual abundance of gilded vice and willful wickedness lugged in to give the book its wonted flavor.

PRICE 50 cents.

The Burnt Million.

By JAMES PAYN.

Payn's books are always eagerly sought after by all novel readers, and they will not be disappointed in this one. The love of the wealthy money lender for his youngest daughter, and her blind adoration for and belief in him whom all others despised, is very touching. Mr. Payn has certainly in this book sustained his reputation as a novelist.

PRICE 30 cents.

A Scarlet Sin.

By FLORENCE MARRYAT

The very name of Marryat seems to have become associated with reading matter of strong literary merit, and those who read this work will find it is no exception to this rule.

PRICE 30 cents.

A True Friend.

By ADELINE SERGEANT.

An interesting book with a healthy moral tone; the bright, courageous little heroine, whose prospects for earning her living have been injured by her gentle, aristocratic, but selfish friend, takes on her young shoulders the care of her fatherless brothers and sisters, and of her intemperate stepmother. Bravely she guides her bark through troubled waters into a peaceful harbor, proving herself throughout a true-hearted friend.

PRICE 30 cents.

A Smuggler's Secret.

By FRANK BARRETT.

The story is one of this writer's most thrilling tales, full of incident and animation—just the thing to pleasantly occupy an idle hour.

PRICE 30 cents.

The Great Mill Street Mystery. By ADELINE SERGEANT.

"The Great Mill Street Mystery," by Adeline Sergeant, is a story which holds the reader's interest until the end—a sort of old-fashioned story with an elaborate plot, plenty of incident, and entertaining conversation.

PRICE 30 cents.

The Moment After.

By ROBERT BUCHANAN.

Mr. Buchanan has made it the subject of a remarkable little study. The story itself is certainly an impressive one.

PRICE 25 cents.

The Chief Justice.

By CARL EMIL FRANZOS.

Translated from the French by Miles Corbet.

The "Chief Justice" is a strong and admirable portrait, and it is to be hoped that other novels by the same author will soon be translated.

PRICE 30 cents.

Lover or Friend?

By ROSA NOUCHETTE CAREY.

Rosa Nouchette Carey cannot be dull if she tries, or, at any events, she never tries. Her novels make no pretence to deep purpose, and "Lover or Friend" is a simple love story told with plenty of liveliness.

PRICE 50 cents

Heart of Gold.

By L. T. MEADE.

Adaptability and sympathy are two prominent qualities of L. T. Meade, the author of this story.

PRICE 30 cents.

Famous or Infamous.

By BERTHA THOMAS.

An unusually well told tale with many original and strongly-defined characters which will place it in the front rank of modern fiction.

PRICE 30 cents.

The Black Box Murder.

By THE MAN WHO DISCOVERED THE MURDERER.

A very good detective story, simply and pleasingly told.

PRICE 30 cents.

Name and Fame.

By ADELINE SERGEANT and EWING LESTER.

The authors of "Name and Fame" have endeavored, with more success than might have been expected, to justify a bold step across conventional borders. There is a good deal that is readable in the book.

PRICE 30 cents.

Alas!

By RHODA BROUGHTON.

This most popular author has produced an old-fashioned English society novel full of incident and interest. Every one will want to read it a second time. The book is charming, full of esprit, and reveals the master in the handling of a theme, which, in other hands, would be hardly possible. It is a book that can safely be recommended to lovers of good light literature.

PRICE 30 cents.

Brace's Daughter.

By ADELINE SERGEANT.

This clever novel has a special interest for the time in the direct and open fashion in which it approaches the relations between capital and labor in London to-day. Miss Sergeant writes with knowledge and conviction upon the most important topic of the moment.

PRICE 30 cents.

The Rioted Dead.

By FLORENCE MARRYAT.

A powerfully interesting novel by the author of "My Sister the Actress," which has just concluded serial publication in a London weekly, where it attracted considerable attention. PRICE 30 cents.

The Heart of a Maid.

By BEATRICE KIPLING.

A delightful story, by an author hitherto little known in America. PRICE 30 cents.

Maioi: Derrick.

By KATHARINE J. MACQUOID.

The title is the name of the heroine, and the distinctive characteristics of the other personages introduced are arranged so as to give pleasing continuity to the action of the story. PRICE 25 cents.

Derrick Vaughan, Novelist.

By EDNA LYALL.

A strong book of a very high moral tone, as are all the writings by this popular author. The hero carries self-sacrifice to an extreme for the benefit of a drunken father, and this vivid description of his thoughts and struggles are well worth reading. PRICE 25 cents.

Plain Tales from the Hills.

By RUDYARD KIPLING.

It is always pleasant for the reviewer, and particularly for the reviewer of fiction, to come across a new man. Such we think, beyond doubt, is Mr. Rudyard Kipling. His "Plain Tales from the Hills" shows quite unusual powers of observing character and motives, together with a very keen sense of humor and a notable power of dramatic narration. PRICE 25 cents.

Brave Heart and True.

By FLORENCE MARRYAT.

The very name of Marryat seems to have become associated with reading matter of strong literary merit. "Brave Heart and True" is Florence Marryat's last and one of her best novels. PRICE 25 cents.

The Railway Man and His Children.

By MRS. OLIPHANT.

Of all the books written by Mrs. Oliphant, and they are numbered by scores, no work from her pen is more worthy of commendation for general interest and purity of fiction. PRICE 40 cents.

The Mischief of Monica.

By L. B. WALFORD.

Mrs. L. B. Walford is deservedly one of the most popular of English novelists. It is refreshing to take up her last novel, "The Mischief of Monica," and find it original in plot, sparkling in dialogue, and exciting with unique situations. Such a novel as this is as welcome as an oasis in the desert of almost worthless novels that are published nowadays.

PRICE 40 cents.

Olya's Crime.

By FRANK BARRETT.

A Russian sketch alternating between Russia and the English capital. The narrative is vigorous, and displays an extensive acquaintance with Russian territory and custom. Like all else Siberian, its chief feature is cruelty and injustice, intrigue and horrors.

PRICE 40 cents.

In Luck's Way.

By JOHN STRANGE WINTER.

A very interesting novel, full of humor and pathos, written by that successful author, John Strange Winter, who gave us "Bootles' Baby" and other enjoyable works. It is fresh and wholesome throughout, and has a spice of military allusion and life in it as all Winter's novels have.

PRICE 40 cents

Miss Wentworth's Idea.

By W. E. NORRIS.

Mr. Norris is the typical novelist of contemporary social life. He never dives very deep or soars very high, but upon the brilliant surface of modern society he skates and swims with never-failing art. "Miss Wentworth's Idea" is full of keen, cynical observation and incisive portraiture.

PRICE 40 cents.

Nor Wife nor Maid.

By THE DUCHESS.

It is full of dramatic situations, written vigorously, as The Duchess always writes, and ends happily, to the surprise of the reader.

PRICE 40 cents.

In the Roar of the Sea.

By J. BARING-GOULD.

The scene is laid on the Cornish coast in the old smuggling and wrecking days, and there is an abundance of thrilling adventure, as well as that vigorous character-painting for which the author is noted.

PRICE 40 cents.

The Marriage of Elinor.

By MRS. OLIPHANT.

The last work from Mrs. Oliphant's prolific pen, "The Heir Presumptive and the Heir Apparent," met with a large and immediate sale. Press and public pass the invariable verdict upon the works of this author—"Always interesting." She does not attempt too much. She knows what she can do, keeps within her limit, and does it well. As a successor to her recent work, "The Railway Man and His Children," this is worthy of more than ordinary commendation.

PRICE 10 cents.

Santa Barbara.

By OUIDA.

In spite of the long array of titles now offered by this author, there is no diminution of power, no decrease in the fascination she holds for readers of the best fiction. Her pictures from life are marked by the same vigor which made "Strathmore" and "Under Two Flags" the sensations of the year in which they were published.
